The moment his time was out he went and punched L. S. Hewitt for a financial injury, and threatened to touch up several others; and for this he was fined $36, and in default sent to jail again. But later he paid his bill, and accepted liberty.

Capt. Ferdinand Takacs, a Hungarian exile, went to Decatur county with Count Ulysses in 1850, and has lived there since. In all this time he has been in Leon but once, and then it was a place of seven houses. He lives on three acres of ground, in a small log cabin, which he keeps scrupulously clean. The captain was lately induced to visit Wesley Howdeshill, a neighbor, who had been urging the visit for three years. The captain is now seventy-seven years old, and has been troubled in his mind since 1854.

The Mason City boys are having a good deal of fun in the expense of Sheriff Mock of Hancock county. It appears that when local talent was presenting the Hidden Hand in his new hall at Garner, the little boys behind the scenes kept thrusting their heads out to look over the audience, and in a general way annoyed the general Black Diamond. At last, unable to put up with such unbecoming stage conduct, our hero rushed behind the curtains and energetically grabbed the nearest boy by the collar and seat of the trousers, and landed him about ten feet in the background. Judge of our indignant friend's consternation and surprise on learning that his supposed and supposed was the lady heroine of the play, Captain, in her costume and character of the new baby.

Worked Wonders. "My daughter was very bad off on account of a cold in her lungs. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil cured her in twenty-four hours. One of the boys was cured of sore throat. This medicine has worked wonders in our family." Alvah Puckney, Lake Mahopac, N. Y.

Sorghum in Ohio. Secretary Chamberlain's article on the decline of the sorghum industry in Ohio was quite a surprise to those of us who live in the western part of the state—the more so, as Mr. Chamberlain is widely known and esteemed as a wide-awake, level-headed and thoroughly practical man; indeed, an authority on all matters pertaining to the farm. But then, I suppose, all great men have their crochets, and this is about as harmless as any in which he can indulge. Any way, this industry must stand or fall simply on its own merits; for our worthy secretary can no more write the sorghum industry, either up or down, than he can change the immutable laws of supply and demand.

The chief points in the article alluded to are that the cane crop is on the decline; that it does not pay, and that sugar can not be made in paying quantities. The statistics showing the decline in production may be reliable, but they may not. The writer once asked the town assessor if the amount manufactured or the amount raised on the farm should be reported. He replied that he desired the number of gallons made of cane of my own raising. I did not report any at all as I grew no cane that year; and as I made all the molasses for this neighborhood, I suppose the eight thousand gallons made at my factory were not reported at all by anybody. In this (Miami) county, Ohio, the cane business is in a very healthy and growing condition, and pays. The writer makes an average of about 8,000 gallons of molasses annually. There are besides in the western half of this county, not less than seven similar establishments or factories, each making say 5,000 more. Six of these factories have permanent buildings and powerful steam engines devoted exclusively to this business. A spirited rivalry exists, which insures the greatest care in manufacturing at the minimum cost price. New machinery and enlarged facilities are added from time to time, and yet all are crowded with work to their utmost capacity.

Here, then, within a territory of ten by twenty miles, are made not less than 30,000 to 40,000 gallons of molasses each year. None of this large amount is exported, but the whole production is taken for home consumption at low prices. For the past three years molasses has sold at sixty cents per gallon, and so brisk has been the demand that it would have been difficult to find a single barrel for sale one month after the close of the season of boiling.

But Mr. Chamberlain says it does not pay. Let us refer to my books. I find that the average yield of amber cane for three years past has been about one gallon per square rod, or 160 gallons per acre. Orange cane, when mature, has done much better, say 225 gallons per acre. This is on lands that will produce from fifty to sixty bushels of corn to the acre.

The relative cost and profit of each is about as follows: CORN. Sixty bushels per acre, worth 50c. per bush. $30.00 Expense: Sowing, preparing and planting, $4.00 Cultivating and hoeing, $3.00 Harvesting, $2.50—9.50 Profit, $20.50

CANE. One hundred and sixty gallons at 50c. per gal. $80.00 Expense: Sowing, preparing and planting, $4.00 Cultivating and hoeing, $3.00 Harvesting and hauling to mill, $2.00 Profit, $67.00

It may be said that good lands will produce more than sixty bushels of corn per acre. Admitted. One especially the orange variety, has produced, under favorable conditions, as much as 350 gallons per acre. One lot of 35 square rods made this season 86 gallons of thick molasses, of extra quality. But this is exceptional. One hundred and sixty gallons at 50 cents per gallon can be raised and sold as easily as an extra bushel of corn at 40 cents per bushel. Nor is there an exhausting crop. The large yield referred to was the third successive crop upon the same plot of ground, with out manure. Where the seed is allowed to ripen, and is afterwards removed, it is no doubt to that extent exhaustive, but where the seeds and blades are left on the ground to decay, experience has shown that cane may be grown on the same lands year after year, with little or no diminution in the yield or quality.

But little sugar is made in this part of the state, at least so far as my information extends; not because it is impossible or impracticable, but because the cost of the machinery required, and with present prices of sugar and molasses, relatively, the margin of profits on sugar-making is small. When molasses goes below fifty cents per gallon, sugar can be made to pay, tariff or no tariff.

The uniform price of twenty cents per gallon is charged for making molasses, and an outfit costing, say $1,500, including buildings, will suffice for making two hundred gallons per diem easily.

The tendency here seems toward centralization in large establishments, as a better article can be uniformly produced at the minimum cost by systematizing the work and by the use of improved machinery. The small, badly provided, one-horse mills are now nearly all abandoned as results with such machinery are too uncertain, or of very inferior quality. The cost per gallon is also greater when made in small quantities.

possess Scotch Pine, Austrian pine, white pine, Norway spruce, red cedar, Irish juniper and American arbutovita. For small grounds, city yards and cemeteries we would recommend a collection of hardy dwarf evergreens, such as dwarf and weeping juniper, with a variety of dwarf arbutovites, interspersed with a collection of hardy flowering shrubs and roses, selected with a view of having a succession of bloom as long as possible. In a collection of hardy flowering shrubs we would name the following as the most reliable: Weggelia, Spiraea, Hydrangea, Japan Quince, Althaea, double flowering almond and lilac, and in every collection of roses, care should be taken not to leave out La France and Alfred Colomb.

Where to buy—We have a number of good, reliable nurseries, both east and west. But our soil and climate is so different from the east that our people would do well and succeed much better to buy their trees and plants from home nurseries and practical nurserymen, in place of patronizing irresponsible tree dealers. It should be remembered by our people that many trees and plants that are very fine and desirable in the east are wholly worthless here.
